Origin of Christmas markets in Germany

By Nicole Karsch-Meibom
Kaiserslautern American Contributing writer

They are called “Weihnachtsmarkt” or “Christkindlmarkt,” originally depending on whether the region is Protestant or Catholic. Whatever the name, however, they are great opportunities to get into the spirit of the season. Get ready for Christmas markets of all kinds — from festive to freaky, from traditional to trendy.

The idea that the “Christkind” (Christ child) brings Christmas gifts dates back to the Protestant reformer Martin Luther (1483 to 1546). In his time, it was traditional to give children presents on Dec. 6, St. Nikolaus Day.

To turn away from the Catholic veneration of saints and saint’s days, Luther laid gift-giving in his household on Christmas Eve. He told his children that “Holy Christ” had brought their presents. This tradition quickly took hold in Lutheran families. Through the years, this fictional gift-giver took form. It was most likely the medieval German tradition of Christmas plays, with an angel of the Annunciation as the main character, which gave the Christmas angel its earthly appearance. As angels of all sorts began to be depicted as female, and not only male, the Christkind also took on a feminine appearance. That is why today a young woman is chosen usually to play the part of the Christkind.

Nevertheless, whatever the name, from crib figurines to wood carvings, it can all be found at a Christmas market. Depending on the size of the event, some markets last from the end of November to Christmas Eve, whereas others might just take place on one single weekend. Note that Sunday will be a remembrance day on which all shops in Catholic regions will be closed. Deciding which market to visit can be difficult, since there are so many.

Garrison tradition: Holiday tree lighting ceremonies

By USAG Stuttgart Public Affairs

Every year it seems the holiday season was just here and now there’s a new one on the horizon. With deployments uprooting families and world events that distract and disrupt, families need a traditional event, an old standby to make them stop and appreciate the season’s joy. If ever there was such an event, it’s the annual Holiday Tree Lighting Ceremony. Depending on Mother Nature you may experience snow or sun, flowers or flurries, winds or warmth, but unwrap the ceremony and you’ll find the same heart-warming staples — holiday carols, refreshments, and of course the stars of the show — Santa and the newly lit tree.

It may seem that Army Morale, Welfare, and Recreation Programs is especially busy at this time of year, but their programs are non-stop all year in keeping with their mission to serve and enhance the lives of all members of the Army Community — Soldiers who serve as well as the families and civilian personnel who serve and support them day in and day out. To this end, they operate recreation and leisure programs for adults and children all year round. Information about these activities in Stuttgart can be found at stuttgart.armymwr.com.

‘chocolArt’: Tübingen’s feast for chocoholics

By Carola Meusel
USAG Stuttgart Public Affairs Office

Those who cannot resist the sweet and delicate taste of chocolate or are simply looking for a savory gift, may want to head to Tübingen for the International Chocolate Festival, or “chocolART,” the largest chocolate festival in Germany.

The festival, which runs Nov. 29 – Dec. 4 throughout downtown Tübingen, features more than 100 skilled chocolatiers from Europe, South America and Africa who offer a variety of fine chocolates.

During the festival, visitors will find chocolate creations that differ from products typically offered in a supermarket.

At the event there will be over one hundred vendors from over 20 countries.

Tübingen’s historic half-timbered houses are festively illuminated during the International Chocolate Festival, or “chocolART,” the largest chocolate festival in Germany. This year’s festival will run Nov. 29 – Dec. 4 throughout Tübingen’s downtown area. Chocoholics may be happy to hear that chocolates can be sampled throughout the event.

Visitors can experience chocolate in many ways throughout the festival, since the chocolatiers play with exotic ingredients and offer various chocolate and praline compositions that make for a different taste.

Another unique treat is chocolate beer, a dark beer with a hint of cocoa. This year, chocolate beer from Belgium and France will be featured at the event.

The chocolate festival also features chocolate massages, hands-on classes on making pralines and truffles, chocolate art, chocolate menus in restaurants, chocolate tastings, chocolate exhibitions, a seminar on chocolate and wine, and a class on painting with cocoa.

A highlight is the “chocolate-Room” at Tübingen’s market square. Chocolatiers will create chocolate art in two transparent tents. While watching the “Maitre Chocolatiers” work on their pieces of chocolate art, visitors can breathe in the sweet smell of cocoa. Better still, all of the chocolates can be sampled on the spot.

substitute for love. Love is a substitute for chocolate.” — Miranda Ingram, British writer.

The “Tübinger Schokoschaumkuss” (chocolate foam kiss), or, “Choco-lino,” is a chocolate-coated marshmallow treat also produced at the chocolate room. Chocolatiers typically add honey to the creamy filing and the chocolate shell is made of 60 percent cocoa.

The festival also aims to promote fair trade and fair trade chocolates and cocoa products can be found throughout the festival.

Children can also create their own chocolate at the Ritter Sport “KinderSchoko-Werkstatt” located at Holzmarkt.

In addition to the festival, Tübingen has another historical connection to the world of chocolate.

According to Tübingen’s city archives, the famous

Schwarzwälder-kirschtorte, or Black Forest cake, was invented in 1930 in Tübingen by the confectioner Erwin Hildenbrand.

This year, a treat was created especially for the chocolate festival: a Black Forest cake made out of high-quality ingredients served in a small glass. A chocolate praline with a creamy Black Forest cake filling will also be available. The cake and praline can be found at the “Tübinger Zuckerbäcker” at Marktplatz.

The festival is open Tuesday from 1-8 p.m., Wednesday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m., and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

According to the event organizer, the chocolate festival typically is very crowded on weekends. Therefore, patrons are advised to travel to Tübingen with public transportation.

Stuttgart schools commemorate Veterans Day

By Holly DeCarlo-White
USAG Stuttgart Public Affairs Office

Students of U.S. Army Garrison Stuttgart's schools participated in ceremonies and in-classroom activities throughout the day, Nov. 10, to honor and thank U.S. veterans for their service and sacrifices.

On Panzer Kaserne, students, parents and teachers rallied in front of the Alexander M. Patch Elementary School, named after World War II veteran Gen. Alexander McCarrell "Sandy" Patch, in the morning for a brief recognition ceremony. Veterans in attendance joined Olivia Alexander, student council president and master of ceremonies, and Col. Glenn K. Dickenson, garrison commander, to open the ceremony. Alexander and Dickenson thanked veterans of all branches for their service, and Dickenson gave students some advice on how to support veterans and current service members.

"Each and every one of you know a service member ... your father, mother or someone who is supporting the service members of this great military community," Dickenson said. "The part that you can play is in supporting them ... what you do for your parents and teachers, here, are things that you are doing for your veterans."

Retired 1st Sgt. James Terrell, PES administrative officer, raised the flag with fifth grade student Skipper Burnett as the national anthem played.

Inside the school, students created a "Wall of Honor," including names and photos of veterans connected to students in the community, to be on display throughout November.

Following the ceremony, Joe Holder, commander, Veteran of Foreign Wars Post 10810, along with several other veterans, volunteered their time to visit classrooms to read "The Night Catch" (a children's story about easing deployment), or to share their military service experiences and answer student questions. Students also presented pictures and thank you letters they had written to the visiting veterans.

Also on Panzer Kaserne, Stuttgart Elementary School students recognized the service of both active and retired service members in an assembly program serenading teachers and veterans in the audience with songs, student written speeches and words of thanks. Members of the Stuttgart High School band and choir ensemble performed a medley of the five armed forces theme songs to recognize attending veterans in staff.

Robinson Barracks Elementary School students were selected to read a Happy Veterans Day message over the loudspeaker during the morning announcements.

“We are the U.S. military, we are Army, we are Air Force, we are Navy, we are Marines, we are Coast Guard, we protect and serve,” said Adelyn Armstrong, RBES student.

SPMAGTF Marines simulate crisis response, enhance unit readiness

Story and photos by Sgt. Jessika Braden
U.S. Marine Corps Forces Europe and Africa

U.S. Marines and Sailors assigned to Special Purpose Marine Air Ground Task Force — Crisis Response — Africa conducted a readiness rehearsal at Naval Station Rota, Spain, Oct. 20.

After receiving a simulated crisis response mission, Marines from elements of the SPMAGTF executed the Rapid Response Planning Process to conduct the short notice mission. Marines from the ground combat element then boarded two MV-22B Ospreys at Air Base Morón and made their way to the extraction point to execute the simulated recovery of a downed pilot.

“Our mission was to tactically recover aircraft and personnel from a potentially hostile environment and return them to friendly lines,” said 1stLt. Khalif I. Yisrael, platoon commander with the SPMAGTF’s ground combat element. “These rehearsals prepare us, as the on-call alert force, to respond to contingency operations any given time.”

During the mission, the Marines embarked aboard the aircraft, evaluated their surroundings and secured the landing area. Once secured, three teams moved to the pilot’s location and safely extracted the simulated casualty.

A U.S. Marine assigned to Special Purpose Marine Air Ground Task Force-Crisis Response-Africa provides security as two MV-22B Ospreys prepare to land during an alert force drill at Naval Station Rota, Spain, Oct. 20, 2016. The purpose of the drill was to rehearse and assess the SPMAGTF’s ability to integrate elements and respond to a time-sensitive crisis. SPMAGTF-CR-AF is designed to provide contingency support to U.S. Africa Command, including tactical recovery of aircraft and personnel, embassy reinforcement, support to noncombatant evacuation operations, humanitarian assistance, and disaster relief.

“[The alert force’s] job is to respond to any mission we are tasked with and ensure it is done swiftly,”

Yisrael said, adding that rehearsals are necessary to maintaining proficiency of vital skills and being able to adapt to a changing environment when it matters most.

In addition to serving as practice for the Marines on the ground, the drill provides the command an opportunity to assess the unit’s ability to integrate elements of the SPMAGTF and adapt to dynamic conditions. Overall, the drill enhances the unit’s readiness for quick response to a broad range of crises, such as tactical recovery of aircraft and personnel, embassy reinforcement, support to noncombatant evacuation operations, humanitarian assistance, and disaster relief.

“These missions allow us to hone our skills as a crisis response unit and mitigate friction points,” said Cpl. Micah S. Salmon, a squad leader with the ground combat element. “The employment of each individual Marine is important in executing the missions and allows communication to flow smoothly.”

SPMAGTF-CR-AF is a self-sustained and self-deployable unit positioned at Morón Air Base, giving U.S. Africa Command and U.S. Marine Corps Forces Africa a broad range of military capabilities to respond to crises in the U.S. AFRICOM area of responsibility.

US paratroopers, Estonian military conduct urban operations training

Story and photos by Pfc. James Dutkavich
24th Press Camp HQ

HELLENURME, Estonia — The paratroopers are armed and ready to secure the site as they proceed towards the objective. With every turn, they must be prepared to take on an enemy threat. Fortunately for them, this is just an exercise, but the scenario and tactics are very real.

Paratroopers assigned to 3rd Platoon, Battle Company, 2nd Battalion, 503rd Infantry Regiment (Airborne), 173rd Airborne Brigade, conducted joint urban operation training with two Estonian military companies and the Estonian border police Thursday in Hellenurme, Estonia.

“Training like this helps strengthen the partnership between the United States and Estonia,” explained U.S. Army Staff Sgt. Scott Stamback, a paratrooper assigned to 3rd Platoon, Battle Company, 2nd Battalion, 503rd Infantry Regiment, 173rd Airborne Brigade.

“[Working with other NATO nations] is a great experience. I'm learning a lot of new techniques, learning the way they do things, and sharing the way we do things. So, I think it is fun.”

Operating in urban environments presents service members with challenges not found in other areas. Soldiers must be prepared for a wide variety of threats, which can emerge in the form of close quarter combat or long-range engagement.

During the exercise, U.S. Army paratroopers and Estonian military cleared and seized buildings while the opposing force, consisting of Estonian military and the Estonian Border Police, fought to maintain control until their reinforcements arrived.

“We are building a stronger partnership,” said U.S. Army Spc. Nathan White, a paratrooper assigned to 3rd Platoon, Battle Company, 2nd Battalion, 503rd Infantry Regiment, 173rd Airborne Brigade. “Each nation does things a different way. We are learning from them, and they are learning from us.”

The 173rd Airborne Brigade, based in Vicenza, Italy, is the Army Contingency Response Force in Europe, capable of projecting forces to conduct a full range of military operations across the United States European, Central and Africa Command areas of responsibility within 18 hours.

U.S. Army Spc. Jeffery Hooper, Paratrooper assigned to 3rd Platoon, Battle Company, 2nd Battalion, 503rd Infantry Regiment (Airborne), 173rd Airborne Brigade, supports his Estonian allies by pulling security during joint urban operations training Nov. 3, 2016 in Hellenurme, Estonia.

Estonian military participate as the opposing force and tries to maintain control of the objective during a joint urban operations training Nov. 3, 2016 in Hellenurme, Estonia.

Operation Atlantic Resolve is a U.S.-led effort in Eastern Europe that demonstrates U.S. commitment to the collective security of NATO and dedication to enduring peace and stability in the region.

Editor's Note — U.S. Army Europe is uniquely positioned in its 51 country area of responsibility to advance American strategic interests in Europe and Eurasia. The relationships we build during more than 1,000 theater security cooperation events in more than 40 countries each year lead directly to support for multinational contingency operations around the world, strengthen regional partnerships and enhance global security.

Enjoy Glühwein during this year's Weihnachtsmarkt

By German Embassy Public Affairs Office
Washington D.C.

No German Christmas market is complete without “Glühwein,” the hot, spiced mulled wine that warms holiday merrymakers from the inside out as they stroll through these charming little villages of cloth and wood with family and friends.

“Glühwein,” which literally means “glowing wine,” is served at every Christmas market in Germany. It often comes in a limited-edition, seasonally inspired and creatively adorned ceramic mug. For a small additional fee, you can either keep this cute little mug as a memento of a visit to a particular Christmas market — often the year and name of the town or city where you purchased your cup of Glühwein is inscribed on the mug — or you can return it to get your deposit (Pfand) back to buy something else, like your next glass of Glühwein.

Glühwein is usually prepared from red wine, which is heated up and spiced with cinnamon sticks, cloves, star anise, orange juice plus zest and sugar, as well as — albeit more rarely — with vanilla pods. Sometimes it is also drunk “mit Schuss” (with a shot), which means that a shot of rum or another liquor has been added.

The expression “Glühwein,” or “glowing wine” apparently stems from the hot irons once used for mulling. Although this is no longer the case today, the historic origins of Glühwein reportedly date back to when wine started going bad, but thrifty folks did not yet want to throw it out, so they added some honey and spices to make it drinkable again.

Today, the beverage is popular in German-speaking, as well as in the Alsace region of France and many other parts of northern Europe. The oldest documented Glühwein tankard is attributed to Count John IV of Katzenelnbogen, a German nobleman who was purportedly the first grower of Riesling grapes. His gold-plated lockable silver tankard is dated to about 1420.

Glühwein can be enjoyed with “Lebkuchen,” the chewy spice cakes perfected centuries ago in Nuremberg and popular all over Germany, or all manner of other treats served up at traditional German Christmas markets, including roasted nuts like “gebrannte Mandeln” (burnt almonds), “Reibekuchen” (potato pancakes), or “Stollen,” a dense, marzipan-infused fruit cake masterminded by Dresden-based bakers. Or you could just enjoy your Glühwein with a piping hot bratwurst.

Some markets in Germany and Austria also serve “Weißer Glühwein,” or Glühwein made with white wine.

Other warm seasonal alcoholic beverages, are known as “Punsch” (punch) and “Grog.” Kids are also sometimes served “Kinderpunsch” (children’s punch) based on non-alcoholic variations on the same theme that tend to taste similar to fruity and spicy hot apple cider.

Another popular variant of Glühwein in Germany is the “Feuerzangenbowle.” Popular on New Year’s Eve, it shares the same recipe, but for this drink a rum-soaked, cone-shaped sugar loaf (sugar cone) is set on fire and allowed to drip into the wine.

But the Glühwein most commonly sold at seasonal Christmas markets is made with red wine. Luckily everyone is on foot in the narrow “streets” crisscrossing these cozy markets set up on town squares, given that indulging in several glasses of Glühwein could result in some wobbly walking, at least until the next tasty seasonal snack is consumed to help soak up all of that Glühwein goodness!

Editor’s note: This article is reprinted with permission from the German Missions in the United States (German Embassy), from their website: www.germany.info

Making it at home...

Glühwein recipes vary greatly, but the core of most of them centers around the following ingredients:

Ingredients:

- 750 milliliters (one bottle) of red wine.
- 1 or 2 citrus fruits (lemon, orange etc.), cut into slices or wedges
- A few sticks of cinnamon
- Sugar (anywhere from a couple of tablespoons to 3/4 of a cup, depending on taste)
- Additional seasonings (anise, clove, nutmeg and ginger are all popular seasonings), use sparingly

Directions:

The ingredients are mixed (squeeze fruit juices into mixture, then add the squeezed wedges or slices), and brought just to a boil before being removed from the heat to steep. After a time of steeping (usually an hour or two, though some like to leave it for a day or more), the solid ingredients are strained out and the wine is served hot in ceramic or glass mugs.
