Community rallies to help find missing teen — family grateful

Realizing a child is missing is a parent's worst nightmare. When Maria Benton, a 15-year-old special needs student at Patch High School, didn't return home from school Sept. 17, that nightmare came true for the Benton family.

Jerry Benton, her father and a local contractor, made a call to the school bus office staff, who verified that Maria never got on the bus. After a search around the school and other facilities on Patch Barracks by administrators, she was nowhere to be found.

A disruption of Maria's daily routine contributed to the cause of her disappearance. Maria's brother, Riki, was at home sick, so she was alone that

Protecting against cyber threats is shared responsibility

Commentary by Col. John P. Stack
USAG Stuttgart commander

We are living in an era where we are more interconnected than ever before. Not only do we rely on email to conduct our business, but the emergence of online commerce has made many of us reliant on the Internet to meet our day-to-day needs.

With all the convenience the Internet provides, it should also come with a warning label. Increased connectivity brings an increased risk of crime, which is why cyber security should be forefront in everyone's mind, both on- and off-duty.

Military members have a big role to play in the realm of information security. Information operations are a real and emerging threat. Just as we would prepare for the battlefield, we must also be ready to safeguard the information that adversaries could use against us.

And those adversaries are everywhere ... in the form of hackers, spear phishers and terrorist groups. Email scams, fake websites and viruses are just a few of the methods used by these cyber criminals to get our personal information.

Col. Stack

Protecting your information, both professionally and personally, isn't difficult if you follow a few steps.

The simplest way to safeguard information is not to divulge it. You should never share personal information with websites you don't know and trust. This includes your Social Security Number, bank account information, addresses, phone numbers ... any personally identifiable information.

Changing your passwords regularly is another way to protect yourself online. Strong passwords include a mix of letters, numbers and special characters, and should be something that is not easy to figure out.

Surfing the Internet has become America's new pastime — as common now as watching television.

While it's fun, you really have to pay attention to what you're looking at. Phishing websites, designed to look identical to others, are all over the Web, preying on users who can't tell the difference. Make sure the address you're surfing to is correct, and be on the lookout for anything out of the ordinary, such as misspelled words and repeated requests for personal information.

The Department of Homeland Security has a cyber security awareness campaign that sums it up quite well ... "Stop. Think. Connect." I encourage you to visit their website for more information and tips.

Remember, cyber security has a direct correlation to force protection, so we must do everything possible to secure our information.

Sgt. David A. Beaton, 554th Military Police Company, and Stuttgart Criminal Investigation Division Special Agents Jesse Landrigan and De Antwan Young confront an active shooter in Patch High School during Stallion Shake 2012, U.S. Army Garrison Stuttgart's all-hazard, full-scale exercise, held Sept. 22.

Active-shooter exercise enhances garrison readiness

By Susan Huseman

USAG Stuttgart Public Affairs Office

U.S. Army Garrison Stuttgart tested its emergency response and antiterrorism capabilities by conducting a full-scale, all-hazards exercise on Patch Barracks Sept. 22.

During Stallion Shake 2012, the garrison tested various aspects of its emergency management plan to include communications, random antiterrorism measures, intelligence information sharing and intelligence analysis.

Using an active-shooter scenario, the exercise was designed to not only test the garrison's defense and response capabilities, but the city of Stuttgart's first responders as well.

"Stallion Shake enables us to work with our German partners — law enforcement and first responders — and integrate them into our plans, since we really do work hand and glove with the Germans in terms of security," said Col. John P. Stack, the USAG Stuttgart commander.

With the five USAG Stuttgart installations located in different German law enforcement and emergency responder jurisdictions, rotating the location of the annual exercise becomes crucial, according to Ron Kirkemo, the garrison's emergency manager.

Last year, Stallion Shake took place on Panzer Kaserne, with Böblingen fire and police units — a first.

This year, the exercise on Patch Barracks was another first, and allowed garrison officials to become familiar with several new first-responder organizations.

More than 250 host nation emergency responders participated from the Polizeipräsidium Stuttgart (Stuttgart police headquarters), Branddirektion Stuttgart (Stuttgart Fire Department headquarters), Deutsches Rotes Kreuz (German Red Cross), the Deutsche Lebens Rettungs Gesellschaft (German Lifeguard Association), Malteser and Johanniter (emergency medical service providers), according to Kirkemo, who planned and coordinated the exercise.

On the U.S. side, more than 50 volunteers — including Boy Scouts from Troop 44 — served as role players, many of them as casualties.

While an exercise based on an active-shooter is relevant and gives military police the opportunity to train on their response, Kirkemo said the scenario could have been almost anything in order to produce mass casualties for first responders to provide medical care and triage.

Numerous casualties were needed to put Stuttgart Fire Department's new triage system to the test.

"This exercise was the first time that Stuttgart was able to utilize and triage patients using the START (Simple Triage and Rapid Treatment) system," Kirkemo said. The system is specifically designed for mass casualty incidents, he added.

START relies on making a rapid assessment of each patient in less than a minute, determining which of four categories patients should be in, and visibly identifying the categories for rescuers who will treat the patients, according to Florian Goedde, the assistant chief of Stuttgart's fire operations branch.

After the exercise concluded, Goedde gave the garrison commander an up-close look at one of the fire department's mobile clinics, capable of treating and transporting up to 10 patients, and its new triage equipment.

"Another benefit of this exercise is that it also helps us to understand the capabilities that exist within the Stuttgart fire and police departments ... and they bring a significant amount," Stack said.

Q: If a civilian is accused of a relatively minor crime or misconduct on post, what happens?

A: In short, Germany has criminal jurisdiction over civilians, both on and off post. However, the military will typically ask German authorities to waive criminal jurisdiction in more minor cases. U.S. Army Europe deals with civilian misconduct through an administrative process called the Civilian Misconduct Action Authority (CMAA) program, which empowers CMAAs (in our case, the garrison commander) to take administrative action pursuant to Army Europe Regulation 27-9, Misconduct by Civilians. The commander has broad authority in this area and is "committed to providing fair and meaningful adjudication of civilian misconduct."

The CMAA investigates cases and then notifies the alleged offender if he or she intends to take administrative actions, which may include counseling or written warning, suspension of individual logistical support, bar from installations, early return of dependents, or even curtailment of a sponsor's tour. An alleged offender is normally given three days to respond before action is taken. An effective response will contain information to disprove the allegations, or will demonstrate extenuating or mitigating circumstances.

The program has procedural rules that ensure basic fairness. It requires notice to the offender, which must include the intended administrative action, the right to examine the investigative file, and the right to respond to the CMAA. Normally, the CMAA will allow the offender to review the evidence in the case file. However, information in the case file may be withheld for good cause, e.g., classified documents, investigative files that would endanger the life or physical safety of law enforcement personnel, or certain medical files. Also note that the three-day response period usually will not be extended to accommodate review of the case file.

This process provides procedural safeguards against unfair administrative actions much like our Constitution provides safeguards against unfair criminal prosecution. Note, however, that Constitutional criminal rights, such as the rights to due process, speedy trial and to confront witnesses, do not apply in the administrative CMAA process.

Alleged offenders may appeal some administrative actions if a case is handled inappropriately. Appeals must be submitted within five days of receiving notice of administrative action. For additional information, see AER 27-9 or visit the Legal Assistance Office for help.

day. The bus wasn't in its usual spot, as it arrived late because of traffic.

Jerry Benton contacted the provost marshal's office, who after reviewing the security cameras at the front gate, saw that Maria had walked off the installation shortly after 3 p.m. U.S. Army Garrison Stuttgart Military Police immediately jumped into action, preparing missing child posters that were shared with the Polizei and community members.

The Polizei shared Maria's photo and description with their patrols throughout the city of Stuttgart, and the search was on.

While discussing the details with the MPs, Jerry Benton had the idea that Maria may try to make her way back home to Denkendorf, more than 20 miles away from Patch Barracks.

"She knows her bus route, and she's really good with her memory" he said. "I started thinking about normal walking speed and the time that had elapsed, trying to determine where to start looking."

Around 6 p.m., a missing child alert with Maria's photo and description was posted onto the USAG Stuttgart Facebook page, and within minutes, the word began to spread. The posting about Maria was shared more than 1,200 times in just a couple hours.

Many members of the community weren't content with simply passing on the message and hoping for the best. More than 70 people, to include Jerry Benton's co-workers and several school faculty members, showed up at the PMO to volunteer to search for Maria.

"I wasn't at the office, but I got a call that a couple people had shown up to volunteer," said Maj. Paul Goynes, USAG Stuttgart Director of Emergency Services. "By the time I got there, 45 to 50 people were there, so we got a plan together in about 15 minutes to send groups out."

Goynes and the military police put the volunteers — split into search teams of three cars each — to work, following Maria's usual bus route. When they would come to a traffic circle, each car would take a separate exit and drive a few miles looking for her before meeting up and reporting back to the PMO.

Minutes after 11 p.m., Jerry Benton received the relieving phone call from the Polizei that they had

If your child goes missing ...

There are several steps that should be taken in the event that your child goes missing, according to the U.S. Army Garrison Directorate of Emergency Services.

Parents should call the military police desk immediately after realizing that a child is missing. When calling, the parent should also have as many details as possible about the physical description, clothing, and other identifying features of the child. Providing a recent photo and listing your child's usual "hangouts" also assists MPs with finding missing children.

"One of the common misperceptions is that you're not a missing person until 24 hours exceeds," said Maj. Paul Goynes, USAG Director of Emergency Services. "That's untrue. Don't wait. Call us immediately so we can start putting together a plan."

found Maria in Filderstadt.

"A lot of people thought that since she was found near a train station, she must have taken public transportation, but no," Jerry Benton said. "She walked about 15 miles along the bus route, and was about five miles from home."

After more than eight agonizing hours, Maria was finally reunited with her family, but the reunion wasn't as dramatic as you might expect.

"When I finally got home that night, I went in her room to check on her," Jerry Benton said. "She was still awake and she looked up at me and asked 'School tomorrow?'"

After a week they'll never forget, the Benton family is getting back to their regular routines, and they want the community to know how appreciative they are for their assistance.

"It was humbling to have all these people I don't know come out to try and find my daughter," Jerry Benton said, adding that he was especially grateful to the Polizei who ultimately found Maria.

"I feel privileged to live in a community that comes together when things like this happen."

Garrison's Command Information Channel set to go off air Oct. 15

By Mark J. Howell

USAG Stuttgart Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Garrison Stuttgart Command Information Channel will go off the air permanently Oct. 15.

The service, which is available solely to Telepost Kabelservice, or TKS, subscribers on military installations, is being discontinued due to continuing budget cuts across the military services. The channel is just one of several mediums that Stuttgart organizations use to inform community members about upcoming events.

"The new fiscal reality is leading to some tough decisions," said Kathleen Cole, Deputy to the USAG Stuttgart commander. "We're not only looking at the cost of programs, but their effectiveness as well."

The Command Information Channel costs more than $10,000 annually to maintain, and is available to less than 30 percent of the community.

Stuttgart isn't the only community seeing the loss of this program, according to Dan Thompson, Installation Management Command-Europe Public Affairs Officer.

"Technology is changing, and we are changing with it," Thompson said. "Just as the telegraph and now even fax machines become less efficient and costlier to maintain, we have to ask if there is a more fiscally responsible way to reach the community in the format of their choice."

Though the TV signal will be gone, Stuttgart organizations wishing to promote their events can continue to submit their slides to be posted on the USAG Stuttgart website. Slides can be emailed to stuttgartmedia@eur.army.mil.

Stuttgart holds suicide stand down

USAG Stuttgart Public Affairs Office

As part of an Army-wide initiative, service members and civilian employees from across the Stuttgart military community participated in a Suicide Prevention Stand-Down Day Sept. 20, while U.S. Africa Command held its stand down Sept. 27.

The stand downs were meant to familiarize all members of the community with the risk reduction, health promotion, suicide prevention and comprehensive Soldier and family fitness resources available within the garrison.

"The theme for the garrison's stand down was "Stuttgart Cares." Activities focused on well-being, resilience and relationship building, while service providers from Army Community Service, Stuttgart Warrior Pride Challenge and Behavioral Health held an information fair at the Panzer Exchange.

In chaplain-led suicide prevention awareness training, the emphasis was on connecting with and knowing one's co-workers, and reaching out to help them when necessary.

It starts with caring and creating a climate of trust. "We may not be able to read peoples' minds and know what is bothering them, but we can be aware of the support programs available, and encourage them to seek help if they need it," said Garrison Commander Col. John Stack, as he discussed the stand down in a garrison employee town hall meeting Sept. 21. "It's the right thing to do."

AFAP conference can help change your world

USAGS tuttgart Public Affairs Office

Have ideas on how the Department of the Army or Department of Defense can improve the quality of life for service members, DOD civilians, and their families?

If so, now is the time to submit them for the next U.S. Army Garrison Stuttgart Army Family Action Plan conference, to be held Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 in the Swabian Special Events Center. Deadline to submit issues is Oct. 25.

"It's a way to change policy ... and enhance quality of life, as well as make a difference for our military members and their families," said Lisa Ordukaya, the USAG Stuttgart AFAP manager.

Although AFAP is an Army program, the conference in USAG Stuttgart, a joint services community, will discuss issues submitted by all service members, and have volunteer delegates representing each branch of service. Everyone is encouraged to submit issues.

"Ideally we want local issues, such as facility operating hours or customer service complaints, to go through ICE," Ordukaya said.

These types of issues should be submitted through the Interactive Customer Evaluation, or ICE, system on the garrison website (www.stuttgart.army.mil).

The goal of the AFAP conference is to brainstorm solutions for issues that can affect the entire Army family or Defense Department.

"Think broad, think big. No idea is a bad idea," Ordukaya said. She suggested that one think of ways to improve systems and programs or enhance quality of life across the board. With budget constraints in mind, she added, "Think of how we can do things better with little to no cost."

Potential issue topics include wounded warrior benefits, single service member quality of life, surviving family member benefits, and existing programs and services.

No matter the topic, every issue submitted will be addressed by the garrison commander.

"Your quality of life issues matter, and we are going to prioritize them, and we are going to send them up to leadership," Ordukaya said. "We want our issues to go all the way up and grab the attention of our leaders in Washington, D.C."

Issues that cannot be resolved at the garrison level are sent to the regional AFAP conference and when applicable, on to the Department of the Army conference.

"Although our commander will review all AFAP issue submissions, our goal is to hear him say, 'This one has to be pushed up to the regional level for resolution,'" she said. "When those issues are pushed up to the regional level, we want the same response: 'Those issues need to go to Department of Army.' This is where the changes can be made and implemented."

Since AFAP was established in 1983, it has resulted in 128 legislative changes, 179 DOD or DA policy changes and 200 improved programs or services, according to DA Headquarters.

These include extending Tricare medical coverage for transitional survivor spouses, in 2010; the distribution of Montgomery GI Bill benefits to dependents, in 2009; and lodging subsistence for family members of hospitalized service members, in 2005.

In addition to submitting issues, active duty service members, reservists, retirees, civilians, family members and youth can participate in the AFAP conference by applying to be a delegate.

Delegates discuss the issues submitted, select those they believe are the

Public Affairs Office

The Marines and sailors of Marine Forces Europe and Africa hosted the fifth annual Theater Marine Conference at the Marine headquarters building on U.S. Army Garrison Stuttgart's Panzer Kaserne Sept. 18-20.

"Many of the Marines who attended the conference are the only U.S. military personnel at their locations and some are the only Americans," said Chief Warrant Officer 3 Don McCutchen, the conference coordinator. "We structured this year's conference to provide information and training pertinent to their situations and administrative support otherwise unavailable to them."

Marines stationed throughout Europe and Africa came to receive annual training, and medical and dental audits not readily available at their outlying duty stations. Some attendees came as far away as Azerbaijan, Morocco, Kenya, Armenia and the United Kingdom.

Col. Gregory Douquet, MFE chief of staff, kicked off the conference with opening remarks, then the Marines received briefs on officer and enlisted assignments, the Defense Travel System, hazing, the MFE and MFA Campaign Plans, and conducted career monitor meetings.

"We established appointments for all the attendees to meet with their monitors," said Chief Warrant Officer 2 Jeremy Piasecki, the MFE administrative operations officer. "These meetings were critical for the Marine attendees who are looking to continue to their next duty stations, as well for their career advancement."

Day 2 began with what Marines do best — physical training, or PT — as the Marines all took their annual Combat Fitness Test.

Then it was back to the classroom for briefs on the Post 9/11 GI Bill, counter-intelligence, "Never Leave a Marine Behind" training, Equal Opportunity and information assurance.

Throughout the day, the Marines also continued their scheduled monitor meetings, conducted administrative audits of their service record books and received dental and medical screenings.

The evening concluded with a professional dinner attended by all the conference attendees and the officers and staff noncommissioned officers of MFE and MFA.

Guest speaker for the coat-and-tie affair was Maj. Gen. Raymond C. Fox, the Marine Forces Africa commander.

"It is essential to pull our Marines back in for their annual training requirements," Fox said, "but equally important to be back amongst Marines and the camaraderie."

Conference attendee Lt. Col. William Nemeth, Marine Attache for the U.S. Embassy in Azerbaijan, echoed the MFA commander's thoughts.

"Coming to MFE for this training and touching base with everything the Marines are doing is great. It allows me the opportunity to see in person how I can best assist the MFE and the European Command's mission," Nemeth said. "And it just feels good to be back in a room full of Marines and see all the familiar faces."

The conference concluded with briefs on ethics, the Sexual Assault Prevention and Response program, and a final round of monitor meetings.

In the end, the organizers were pleased. "Overall, I think the conference went extremely well for the command and for all who attended," Chief Warrant Officer 3 Don McCutchen said.

The 2012 Overseas COLA survey tracks the shopping habits of service members and will help to determine future entitlements.

COLA survey underway

U.S. Army Europe Public Affairs Office

Eligible U.S. Army in Europe Soldiers will soon be asked, via email, to participate in the 2012 Overseas Cost of Living Allowance Overseas Living Patterns Survey, scheduled to run through Oct. 31.

This survey is used to track the shopping patterns of uniformed service members stationed overseas. The data collected will assist in the determination of COLA paid to members in their country of assignment.

The survey is only for service members stationed at 13 locations in Germany; Ansbach, Kalkar, Bremerhavan, Kaiserslautern Military Community, Buechel, Spangdahlem, Garmish, Stuttgart, Geilenkirchen, Vilseck-Grafenwoehr, Heidelberg, Wiesbaden and Hohenfels. The service member also must not be living in the barracks and have been on station for at least three months.

Although participation in this survey is voluntary, maximum response is encouraged so that data will be an accurate representation of the service member's country of assignment.

To prepare for the survey, service members should determine where they purchase groceries, clothing, household furnishings, entertainment, communications and transportation.

Every three years, this survey is conducted to determine the local economy outlets where military families shop. Then, during the follow-on annual Retail Price Schedule, which is scheduled to begin Nov. 10, the prices of 120 goods and services are collected from outlets identified by service members during the COLA survey. The Defense Travel Management Office compares the prices in Germany to those in the U.S. and then calculates the Cost of Living Index which establishes the country's COLA rate per location.

For more information, service members and their family members are encouraged to contact their unit personnel office or visit the COLA survey website at <https://www.defensetravel.dod.mil>.

Run4Life: 'Rockin' and Runnin' for a Cure'

By Megan Clancy
Special to The Citizen

Individuals and teams are invited to be "foot soldiers" in the fight against cancer during U.S. Army Garrison Stuttgart's third annual Run4Life Oct. 26.

Participants can walk or run laps around Husky Field from 6-10 p.m. to honor living cancer warriors and to remember those who lost their battles with the disease.

Cancer warriors are also invited to take part in the opening ceremony and a "victory lap."

Run4Life is sponsored by the USAG Stuttgart Equal Employment Opportunity Office's Special Emphasis Program, for National Disability Employment Awareness Month.

Since 1988, October has been declared National Disability Employment Awareness Month to raise awareness about disability employment issues and celebrate the contributions of America's workers with disabilities, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Cancer is a disability under the Americans with Disabilities Act, according to Eshe Faulcon, a USAG Stuttgart EEO specialist.

Run4Life is designed to raise awareness about cancer and to educate people about cancer prevention, added Faulcon.

Participants can also honor a loved one who has passed or is fighting the disease, during a luminaria ceremony, which will be held at 10 p.m.

"Luminarias are a special way to honor and remember cancer warriors during Run4Life. Each luminaria represents a person. They are our relatives, friends, co-workers and so much more," Faulcon said. Participants will be encouraged to personalize their luminaria to make it special for the person they will honor.

Faulcon is seeking volunteers who can help with the set-up and breakdown, distribute water to participants, light luminarias and pass out health-

Chestnuts

To tell the difference between an edible chestnut and a non-edible chestnut (Horse Chestnut or Buckeye), take a close look at the pod that the chestnuts grow in.

Most of the trees on the Stuttgart areas are Buckeyes, the non-edible type.

The pod of the edible sweet chestnut has a sort of "porcupine" look to it.

Explore city in one night during 'Stuttgart Nacht'

Story by Carola Meusel

USAG Stuttgart Public Affairs Office

To truly explore Stuttgart, a visitor would need at least three days. But what if they only have seven hours?

If they are lucky enough to be in Stuttgart Oct. 20, they can see almost everything that Stuttgart has to offer culturally in seven hours during "Stuttgart Nacht," or Stuttgart Night. The event begins at 7 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 20, and lasts until 2 a.m. Oct. 21.

The program features more than 70 events located in and around downtown Stuttgart, such as theater productions, concerts, dancing, exhibitions, lectures and parties.

Tickets cost €14 when purchased in advance and €16 at the event, and include transportation, along with admission into every location. Shuttle buses will run all night from the Stuttgart Stadtmitte (Rotebühlplatz), Tagblattturm and Siegle Haus.

"During Stuttgart Nacht, visitors can experience a diverse and multifaceted culture program," said Maria Melber, event organizer from "Lift Stuttgart," the city's magazine.

One of this year's first-time events will be held at the Nord, a rehearsal center for the Stuttgart Theater (Löwentorstrasse 68, shuttle bus stop Löwentorbogen, Stuttgart Nord). Here, patrons can experience Stuttgart's popular theater ensemble, the Stuttgart Ballet and the Stuttgart State Opera.

According to Melber, the event promises to be "very exciting" since theater, ballet and opera performances will be all held in one location.

Opera, ballet and theater performances will start at 7:15 p.m., 8:15 p.m. and 11 p.m.

For the first time ever, Stuttgart's oldest and largest city district, Bad Cannstatt, will participate in the annual outing, according to Melber.

Thorsten Strotmann, a popular German magician, will take patrons on a "magical journey" during his "Magic Lounge" sessions at Cannstatt's Römerkastell, a former Roman fort, (Naststrasse 41, shuttle bus stop Römerkastell, Stuttgart Bad Cannstatt). Performances will be held every 30 minutes from 7-11:30 p.m.

Another highlight and first-time participant will

A local band performs during last year's "Stuttgart Nacht" at the "Schräglage" night club. This year, the club will feature live music and a "DJ Clubnight" with reggae, dance hall and hip hop beats exclusively during Stuttgart Nacht Oct. 20 from 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. Oct. 21.

be the Kulturinsel and Zollamt Club (Frachtstrasse 25, shuttle bus stop Frachtstrasse, Stuttgart Bad Cannstatt). During Stuttgart Nacht, the event location for lifestyle, art and culture, will feature a vibrant program, according to Melber.

Stuttgart artists Jan Haas and Marc Wöhr will present their works during the "Urban Art" exhibition from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. Sand-art performances and hands-on activities, where visitors can play, paint and find creative ways to experiment with sand, will be offered during the "Sandlabor" from 7 p.m. to midnight. Live painting with Julia Humpfer, a Stuttgart artist, will be featured from 7 p.m. until midnight. Blues pop concerts with the Stuttgart-based band "Hawelka" will be held at 7:15 p.m., 9 p.m. and 10 p.m.

"The great thing here is that visitors can experience so many different events and genres in one location," Melber said.

Stuttgart's TV tower (Jahnstrasse 120, shuttle bus stop Ruhbank/Fernsehturm, Stuttgart Degerloch) is one of the city's most important landmarks. The 217-meter tower opened its doors to the public in 1956 and was the first of its kind worldwide. During Stuttgart Nacht, visitors can experience a bird's-eye-view of the greater Stuttgart area at the tower's visitor platform at 150 meters from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. The event area "Dazwischen" features the "Stuttgart Saloniker" playing classic and waltz-inspired music from Vienna, as well as tango and jazz tunes.

The Stuttgart Rathaus (Marktplatz 1, shuttle bus stop Schlossplatz, Stuttgart Mitte) will celebrate its 50-year partnership with Strasbourg, Alsace, with folk music concerts (7 p.m., 7:45 p.m., 8:30 p.m., 9:15 p.m., 10:30 p.m.), cooking and food presentations (hourly from 7 p.m. to midnight), chanson concerts (hourly from 10 p.m. to midnight), pantomime performances (hourly from 10:45) and much more.

For medieval songs and classic concerts, patrons can stop by Leonhardskirche (Leonhardsplatz, shuttle bus stop Siegle Haus, Stuttgart Mitte). Performances with the Ensemble Cosmedin will run hourly from 7-9 p.m. Classic concerts with violin and cello will be held hourly from 10 p.m. to midnight.

"The Stuttgart Nacht is a great way for visitors to experience the city from a different perspective," Melber said. "People are welcome to explore different institutions, such as the Rathaus as well as landmarks, museums and churches in a more informal way."

Melber also encouraged patrons to be open to spur-of-the-moment opportunities to fully experience the event's unique atmosphere.

For more information, or to purchase tickets, visit www.stuttgartnacht.de, or call civ. 0711-601-5444. Tickets can also be purchased during the event at all participating event locations.
